How to dispose the masks and protect the environment?

Masks are essential for stopping the spread of COVID-19 during the pandemic and they have become an every day accessory. However, what are the effects of huge increase in the use of disposable masks? The environment is in danger of being another victim if masks are not disposed of carefully.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) recommends discarding them in the "correct" rubbish bin immediately after use and not reusing them. What is the "correct" bin? Masks and other disposable material that are used to contain the pandemic, such as gloves, must not be disposed of in the recycling bin with packaging, cans, etc. or with organic waste. Do not throw them away with your general household rubbish.

Our vision:

Our primary goal is creating a technical background for the process of mask collection which will solve the problem of increasing biomedical waste in the environment due to the pandemic situation. To create such a software having user friendly interface and a database system keeping track of collected masks. Make people aware about the process of converting masks into bricks which will help in keeping surroundings clean and hygienic.
